Four SIR93's Took a Hike

By Don Quesenberry

On August 8, 2019, after much hike planning and cancelling due to the wet spring, Big SIR Craig Chalmers, led Little SIR Jack Reefer, Rich LaBorde and Don Quesenberry on a short, day hike on the Fleming Meadow Trail System. Fleming Meadows is located in a pine/oak forest above Pollock Pines near the Sly Park Reservoir at an elevation of plus or minus 3700 feet.

According to the weather gods, the temperature was to be a pleasant, 80 degrees in Pollock Pines, perfect for a day's hike. We met in a South Land Park parking lot near Barrio's Coffee

Shop/Café where we all gathered our stuff together and climbed into Craig's car and cried "Hi Ho, Hi Ho a hiking we will go!" Good, friendly conversation made the 1 ½ hour drive to Fleming Meadows a short one.

Once we arrived in the parking area, Craig parked under the shade of a very large pine tree. We all got out of the car, stretched, and went to see the big map of the trail system only to find that the part of the trail we planned to take was not on the map. At least there was a big, red dot on the map and a note telling us "you are here". Craig pulled out his hand-held GPS to find out which direction was north; I, being of pre-GPS age, using the hands of my wrist watch, turned my body into a sun dial, and Jack looked for moss on the side of a tree, so together we four managed to find true north. While we dithered about which of the west-bound trails we should take, a fella accompanied by his beautiful, black Lab drove up next to us. Turned out he was a Sacramento fireman who often hiked the trail with his dog. He got us started in the right direction towards trail system # 8 which is a loop trail that wanders up and down and through the forest for a little over 7 miles, with options for deciding on shorter loops. Craig planned that our loop route would be about 3 miles long.

We unloaded our gear from the car. Rich changed into his hiking shorts and, along with Craig and Jack, put on his back pack while I, being different, put on a waist pack. Back packs are best if you need to carry a lot of items including a sweater or jacket, but I find a waist pack ideal for a short day hike. Either side has a place for a water container, and there are 3 small pockets to hold insect repellent, snacks, and a sandwich plus necessary paper items. Equally important, because of the way it rests on the lower back, it lends support to an aching lumbar area. Craig and Jack had hiking sticks; Rich and I didn't and soon came to wish we did.

We began the trail by walking west out of the parking lot along what was once a graveled forest road. We had to climb over a huge fallen pine tree that had fallen across the road and passed between sections of two others that had been chain sawed to clear the road. After about mile, we came to a marker indicating we had arrived at a point where trail # 8 intersected the road. We turned left in a southerly direction following the trail, Indian fashion, in a single line. Here is where Craig's vast hiking experience came into play. He put me, age 86, first in line; Jack, age 78, second, Rich, age 73, third and he, age 63, brought up the rear. That's 23 years difference between Craig's age and mine. I set the pace and off we went along a dusty trail shared by hikers, horses, and mountain bikers. I couldn't help notice how dry the undergrowth was and how many fallen tree branches there were.

I found the trail to be challenging enough. It was fairly level except for several places where it dropped down to cross over a seasonal creek then up again. Here it was “V” shaped from all the winter’s snow run-off. Ugh!! Puff, Puff!! I found myself recalling the childhood story of the Little Red Choo Choo that said: “I think I can; I think can! Craig took pity on me and offered me use of one of his hiking sticks. I gladly accepted and found it to be a great help. We stopped 3 times to rest, drink and snack. During one of our stops at the top of a climb, a mountain biker came huffing and puffing past us. He was the only sign of life we saw on the trail.

After the last rest stop, Jack jumped into the lead position and led us back to the road to the parking lot. When we reached the road, Craig said there was another loop trail of a little over a mile long that he would like to take. As tired as I was, I said I was up to doing it. Craig looked at me and said “Maybe but no...you’re 86 years old and we want to stay together and we don’t want to carry you back. We’re going back to the car.” I thought: “Bless you, my son!!” According to Craig’s GPS we hiked 2.9 miles in 3 hours.

No summer’s day hike is complete unless it is followed by an ice cold beer. Craig knew where to find one in Pollock Pines: The 50 Grand Restaurant and Bar in Pollock Pines. It offered only one kind of draft beer, an IPA which was served tall and ice cold. Maybe it was due to my being so tired and thirsty, that I found that particular IPA one of the best I’ve ever drunk. Jack, Rich and I held our glasses high and toasted Craig for such a great day.
